BUY A SM:)E

ONE SM:)E CAN MAKE ALL THE DIFFERENCE
Born with a brain abnormality called polymicrogyria and a condition affecting his windpipe, Krsna was in the hospital for 17 months. Parents Franciska and Dinesh recall how stressful and scary that time was.

Today, Krsna is at home and making progress. Franciska looks forward to the new SSCY facility and its coordinated services. "Having a one-stop-shop will be good because I don't drive and having several appointments lined up for one visit makes things much better," she says.

Franciska is hopeful about the future and what her son can achieve in life. Her immediate goals are seeing him learn to walk and to one day be toilet trained. She feels blessed that he's home and that her family has the support they need to keep moving forward.

Aiden was born with spina bifida, which involves incomplete development of the spinal cord or its coverings and can result in a variety of disabilities. For parents Kayla and Ian, it was difficult having many appointments at different times in different places. Kayla didn't drive and was also caring for Aiden's older brother Liam. Ian had to take time off work.

They can appreciate how much easier it will be for families in the SSCY Centre. "Everything from coordination of appointments to easier parking to having an air conditioned building will make a huge difference," says Ian. "When you're already stressed about your child's health, all the other little aggravations seem that much worse."

At six years old, Aiden's ready smile and bustling energy belie the many challenges he's faced in his short lifetime. He looks forward to having a fun new place to practice using the equipment he needs to help him get around and stay active. His dream? To play sledge hockey!

At 18, Ellen is an inspiration to families with younger children with disabilities. Born with cerebral palsy, Ellen has limited mobility and is unable to communicate with words. Still, she is fearless and loves tubing, riding her jet ski or ATV, kayaking, swimming and cycling.

Her mother, Colleen, is grateful for the care that has made it possible for Ellen to live life to the fullest. Specialists have helped with everything from sleeping and feeding issues, to allergies and integration into public school, to creating the modified equipment that has given Ellen a level of independence otherwise impossible.

Colleen is relieved to hear about all the improvements the new SSCY Centre will bring. She's looking forward to the bright, open spaces and the various features designed with families in mind.

A place where kids find their abilities and where families find the ability to encourage and support them. A place where the impossible becomes possible.

"It’s going to be so much better to have a truly welcoming place in an environment that conveys optimism and hope for the wellbeing of your child."
